READY TO GIVE AID TO FRENCH ALLIES

Gen. Haig Says British Have Done All They Were Asked to Do.

LONDON, May 30.—Gen. Sir Douglas Haig, commander of the British forces in France and Belgium, in a dispatch covering the operations of the British army in that territory from December 19 last, when he took over the command, until May 13, pays high praise to the French defense of Verdun and reviews in detail the actions in which the British have taken part.

"During this period," he says, "the only offensive effort made by the enemy on a great scale was directed against our French allies near Verdun. The fighting in that area has been prolonged and severe. The results have been worthy of the traditions of the French army and of great service to the cause of the allies.

"The efforts made by the enemy have caused him heavy losses, both in men and prestige and he has made these sacrifices without gaining any advantage to counterbalance them.

Ready to Co-Operate. "During this struggle my troops have been in readiness to co-operate as they might be needed, but the only assistance asked for by our allies was of an indirect nature, namely, the relief of the French troops on a portion of their defensive front. This relief I was glad to be able to afford. Its execution on a considerable front, everywhere in close touch with the enemy was a somewhat delicate operation, but it was carried out with complete success, thanks to the cordial co-operation and good will of all ranks concerned, and to the lack of enterprise shown by the enemy during the relief."

While no action comparable with that at Verdun has been fought on the British front, Gen. Haig says the struggle has been continuous and that there have been many sharp local actions. The maintenance and repair of the trenches alone entailed continued and heavy work. He speaks of the continuous activity of the artillery, infantry, armen and sappers and miners and adds:

"Ever-present threats cause a more constant strain than any other form of warfare."

Sixty Local Actions Fought. There were sixty local actions during the period under review, some of which, says Gen. Haig, "although individually insignificant in a war on such an immense scale, would have been considered worthy of a separate dispatch under different conditions."

The dispatch closes with a tribute to Field Marshal Viscount French, who, says Gen. Haig, "starting the war with our small expeditionary force, faced an enemy far superior in numbers and fully prepared for this great campaign."

"During the long and anxious time needed for the improvisation of the comparatively large force now serving in this country," continues Gen. Haig, "the general came all difficulties, and before laying down his responsibilities he had the satisfaction of seeing the balance of advantage swing steadily in our favor. Those who served under him appreciate the greatness of his achievement."

Woman Recruiting for Uncle Sam. NEW YORK, N. Y., May 30.—The first woman recruiter in America, Miss Edna Payne, pretty and winsome, has established headquarters in this city, at 39th street and 6th avenue, and is receiving applications for enlistment in the regular Army, Navy and Marine Corps. Miss Payne, who is intensely patriotic, has a real desire to serve her country, but already caused the enlistment of one man in the Army, one in the Navy, and two in the United States Marine Corps. Her recruiting is done entirely on her own account, and has no official sanction.
